

The Center

For Advanced Study in the Visual Arts

National Gallery of Art

Award Period:
September 2022 –
Summer 2024

Deadline:
March 15, 2022

Two-Year, Paid Undergraduate Internships 2022 – 2024

The Center for Advanced Study in the Visual Arts at the National Gallery of Art, in partnership with Howard University, has established a program of two-year, paid undergraduate internships aimed at creating pathways to careers in museums and arts-related organizations.

Full-time undergraduate freshmen and sophomores of all majors and disciplines are invited to apply. Previous museum experience or art history coursework is not required.

Over the course of the two-year internship, participants will receive an introduction to art history and research methodologies and gain insights into museum work. Through seminars, mentoring, and departmental projects (both at the National Gallery and the Howard University Gallery of Art), interns will be exposed to various museum careers, including curating, conservation, research, archival work, and library services. There will be an emphasis on professional and transferrable skills, as well as on fostering a lifelong appreciation for the arts and humanities.

Applications

Applications will open mid-January 2022. For more information, visit nga.gov/HowardUniversity.

Alma Thomas, Red Rose Cantata, 1973, acrylic on canvas, National Gallery of Art, Washington, Gift of Vincent Melzac, 1976.6.1